WATER DISTRICT TELLS VOTERS IT'S DOING A VERY GOOD JOB

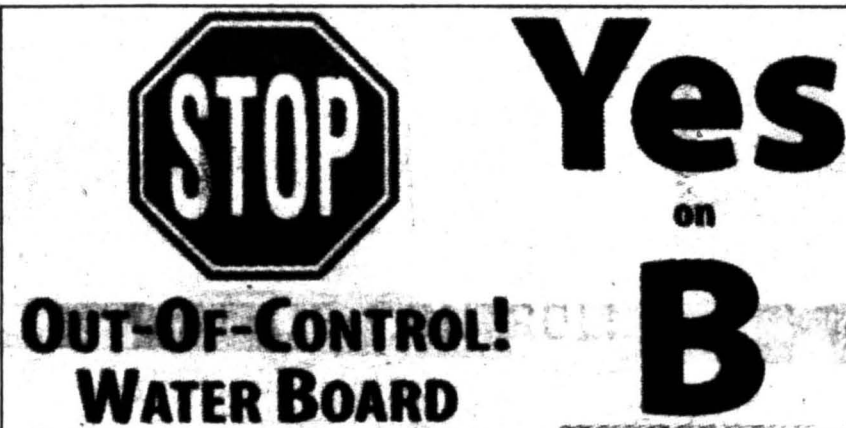

By PAUL MILLER

JUST THREE weeks before an election that could put it out of business, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District has sent voters a newsletter trumpeting its achievements.

The timing of the newsletter, in which the district described itself as a "public watchdog" that has practiced "wise management" of local water resources, was a coincidence, according to water district general manager Ernie Avila.

"The board didn't want to wait for this year's annual report to get information out to the public about what the district is doing," Avila said. In April, the board set aside $10,000 to start a newsletter. In September, it upped the amount to $25,000. Another newsletter could be mailed out before election day.

"People could make allegations of propaganda or what-have-you," Avila said. "But we started doing more outreach in

City Council alarmed at coastal plan changes

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CITY Council, dismayed by a rewrite of its proposed Local Coastal Program that members said would turn Carmel into Disneyland, decided the best way to fight the changes pushed by the California Coastal Commission's staff is to send Mayor Sue McCloud directly into negotiations.

Council members unanimously agreed Carmel should stand by the policies in the city's original version of the Land Use Plan protecting Carmel's identity as a residential community, rather than a business center or a resort.

Several council members pointed to the fact that the coastal commission's rewrite of the LCP — emphasizing Carmel's role as a visitor destination — is in direct conflict with the city's golden rule: "Carmel is primarily, essentially and predominantly a residential city."

"I feel like we're locked in mortal combat with the coastal commission over the fate of the town," councilman Dick Ely said. "There are numerous comments in [the coastal commission's proposed changes] that suggest we are more of a public resource to serve people from the rest of the world, not unlike Disneyland."

"The irony is, if we did the things they suggested, we would not have a Carmel-by-the-Sea," McCloud said. Instead, the quaint, historic town would be turned into the "roller-coaster-on-the-beach," she complained.

Council members and members of the ## Congress attaches I.D. requirement to election reform bill

By PAUL MILLER

DEMOCRATS AND Republicans agreed last week on a package of election reforms that includes spending $3.9 billion on new voting machines, better training for poll workers and improved access to voting booths for the disabled.

The election reform bill also undoes key provisions of the 1993 "motor voter" act that allowed voters to register without providing any form of I.D. That provision led to allegations of voter fraud around the country.

The new bill, HR 3295, requires states to collect a drivers license number, Social Security Number or other verifiable I.D. from newly registered voters and maintain a computerized list of all registered voters. Citizens who register by mail will have to prove their identity before they vote the first time.

"It's unfortunate it took the situation in Florida [after the last Presidential election] to get reform," said Monterey County elections supervisor Tony Anchundo. "I wish the bill required I.D. for everyone, including current registered voters, but when you have millions of people on the rolls, how do you take care of that?"

The voter I.D. provision was opposed by some civil rights groups who contend it will somehow result in discrimination against minorities or the poor. A front-page story in Tuesday's New York Times said the Mexican American Legal Defense Fund and other groups would try to keep the bill from becoming law.

But this week the Congressional Black Caucus and the NAACP backed the measure, saying it would help protect minority voting rights. A spokesman for President George Bush said Wednesday he will sign the bill when it reaches his desk.

According to Anchundo, the punch card voting machines used in Monterey County are not susceptible to the "hanging chad" problem that caused so much trouble in Florida. There is no plan right now to go to computerized voting throughout the county, he said, but the county will stake its claim to state and federal funds so they'll be available when the county does decide to upgrade.

But he said another provision of the new

Another sick sea lion takes refuge on Carmel Beach

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE SEA lion was underweight and dehydrated when it was rescued from Carmel Beach Wednesday — the second sea lion picked up at the beach in a week.

But the details of "Bowser's" medical condition — and even its gender — have yet to come in, reported Erin Brodie, stranding coordinator for the Marine Mammal Center.

It needs time to recuperate before being subjected to a vet's examination, Brodie said.

"The admit exam is usually done a couple of days after the animal arrives, so it can calm down and reduce its stress from the rescue, capture and transport," she said.

The sea lion did not arrive at the Marine Mammal Center's main hospital in Sausalito until after 9 p.m., when it was weighed, put into a pen and given fluids.

After a few days of rest and recuperation, a vet will draw blood from the animal, determine its age and gender, and tag its flipper, Brodie said.

But even before the young sea lion arrived in Sausalito, it was given a name.

"We get the names from folks who may have helped on the beach — reported the animal or stuck around and given a hand — or a new volunteer," Brodie said.

Susi Presley and Kippy Strandberg received the honors and named the sea lion "Bowser" because so many dogs visit Carmel Beach.

Presley, a Folsom resident and frequent visitor to Carmel, reported the animal and helped stopped a man's dogs from bothering Bowser. Strandberg, who sailed down to the Peninsula from Anacortes, Wash., also notified police and kept an eye on the sea lion.

Marine Mammal Center rescuers arrived on the scene within the hour and helped Bowser into a kennel, then up the beach and into the back of a truck for the ride to the hospital. The sea lion was too tired to put up much of a fight.

Council hopes valet parking will boost tourism during AT&T Pro-Am

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL City Council gave the go-ahead for an entrepreneur to set up a valet parking and shuttle system in Carmel during next year's AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

Voting unanimously last week, the council agreed to rent 60 spaces of Sunset Center's north parking lot to National Parking and Valet during the four-day event next year.

National Parking and Valet would then shuttle the guests directly to the VIP tent at the AT&T. The city will receive 40 percent of the valet parking company's total income during the tournament.

Though some council members were initially concerned National Parking and Valet might be taking spaces away from customers using the Carmel Business Association's shuttle to the AT&T that weekend, they finally agreed there was room for everybody.

According to records compiled over the last three years, the Sunset Center north lot has not been a particularly popular parking spot for visitors during the AT&T.

Carmel Assistant City Administrator Greg D'Ambrosio proposed giving National Parking and Valet 60 of the 135 Sunset parking spaces, leaving the remaining 75 for monthly and hourly parkers.

CBA executive director Brenda Roncarati said her organization — which sold more than 1,100 shuttle tickets last year — is considering teaming up with the Carmel Innkeepers' shuttle system this year.

Roncarati told The Pine Cone she isn't concerned about competition for parking spaces. Many of the people who have used the CBA shuttle in the past have parked at the Vista Lobos parking lot or along Junipero Avenue, she said.

"The more people who park in town, the better," Roncarati said. "If people have to come back to the cars at the end of the day, we see that as a good thing."

Several council members said they would welcome the influx of visitors in Carmel and bemoaned the fact that the city has been losing tourism dollars since the AT&T established its main parking facility at Fort Ord.

"Every year during the AT&T, merchants approach me telling me how awful it is that thousands of people are visiting the Monterey Peninsula who are all being ferried to Fort Ord," said councilman Gerard Rose.

"For some time I've been very concerned about visitors being held captive at Pebble Beach," said councilwoman Barbara Livingston. "We ought to look into keeping people in Carmel and not at Fort Ord."

Councilman Dick Ely wondered if the city should be charging more for the use of the Sunset spaces. "I think parking space in Carmel is worth a substantial amount of money," Ely said.

But the council agreed to wait and see how the first year of the valet parking experiment works out before increasing the city's take.

Ely argued the city should make the most of its AT&T parking and shuttles by publicizing the service.

"I know people would love it if they saw a way to get into Pebble Beach during the AT&T," Ely said.

Adrienne Grover named county's newest judge

By MARY BROWNFIELD

COUNTY COUNSEL Adrienne Grover was appointed a Monterey County Superior Court judge this week by Governor Gray Davis. Grover, 40, will take the place of retired Judge Richard Silver.

In announcing the appointment Thursday, Davis praised Grover for her work as the county's top lawyer and cited her experience in land use and planning, environmental law, water rights, public works, contract law, taxation and bond financing, health care, probate, mental health, juvenile issues and public employment.

Whether seated in juvenile, criminal or civil court, Grover said she is excited and eager to get to work.

"Whatever I'm assigned to will be new and challenging and interesting for me," she said.

Born in the San Francisco Bay Area, Grover obtained a B.A. in linguistics from UC Berkeley in 1984 and was preparing for graduate work in the same subject at the Universität Bamberg in Germany when she decided to follow in her father's footsteps and headed to law school instead.

She received her juris doctorate degree from the Santa Clara University Law School and then went to work for the corporate law firm, Long & Levit, in 1990.

After two years, she left the private sector for the three-attorney Calaveras County Counsel's Office, where she did everything from preparing reports for the planning commission to advising the tax collector and the dog catcher.

Grover left the Sierra foothills in 1995 to become a deputy Monterey County Counsel, took on the role of acting county counsel after Doug Holland left in September 1999 and was officially chosen to succeed him in March 2000.

"These have been the most enjoyable times in my career — the times when I'm in a brand new situation, dealing with brand new issues every day and a steep learning curve," she said.

And Grover, who lives in Carmel with her husband and daughter, continues to follow in her father's footsteps: He served as a superior court judge in Riverside County from 1976 to 1992.

"It was totally unintentional — it's not something I expected or set out to do," she said. "It's funny what direction fate pushes you in."

Printing company gets $85K General Plan job

By MARY BROWNFIELD

NO ONE else wanted the job, assistant county administrator Jim Colangelo said of Monterey County's request for someone to lay out and print copies of the weighty General Plan Update and its accompanying Environmental Impact Report.

Only Salinas-based Martella Printing stepped up to the plate, and the board of supervisors without discussion approved a contract with the company to prepare 1,000 copies of each document for $85,500.

"We didn't do a formal bidding process; we just called around and gave our constraints, the size and the turnaround time, and they were the only ones who showed an interest in wanting to take on a job like this," Colangelo said.

The printer will design and lay out the covers, reset the type, reformat and print the 100 color maps that appear in each document, and print and bind 1,000 copies of both for distribution.

"One of the reasons it's costly and the reason we had trouble getting people to do this is the turnaround time," Colangelo said, because county officials have a tendency to make decisions and want the revised documents within days.

"They [Martella Printing] recognize there will be some pretty tight timelines and a lot of work that needs to be done," Colangelo said.

He also said going to the trouble of hiring a professional to print the EIR and update after this round of hearings and changes — rather than simply copying them — will make future revisions easier to incorporate and therefore less costly down the line.

While agencies typically require members of the public to pay for copies of plans and environmental studies, the county decided to make print and CD-ROM versions of the General Plan Update and EIR available for free and also posted them on the Internet at www.co.monterey.ca.us/gpu.

Supervisors are currently discussing the General Plan Update, which so far has cost $4 million, according to Colangelo.

Hearings are scheduled for Oct. 14 beginning at 1:30 p.m. They also have time set aside during their regular meeting Oct. 15 and have earmarked Oct. 17, 21 and 22, if necessary. Once the board is finished, the entire plan and revised Environmental Impact Report will be sent back to the planning commission for further review. The board hopes to finalize the update by the end of the year.

Pebble Beach attacker sentenced, released from jail

THIRTY-FOUR-year-old Hassan Arzaghi, the Iranian-born Dutch man who pleaded guilty Sept. 19 to one felony count of assault with a deadly weapon for attacking his ex-girlfriend at her home in Pebble Beach, was sentenced Oct. 7 and released from Monterey County Jail the following day for time served.

Judge John Phillips sentenced Arzaghi to 70 days in county jail — 68 of which he had already served while his case was in court — and five years formal probation. He is also required to perform 40 hours of community service and pay $200 in restitution.

Arzaghi had been in jail since Aug. 23, when he was arrested at San Francisco International Airport trying to leave the country the day after he sought out his ex-girlfriend — a Russian woman working and staying on the Peninsula — at her job in Carmel and attacked her at her home.

According to the sheriff's department, Arzaghi convinced the woman to take him to her home, and then threatened her, held a knife to her throat and forced her into a car before eventually dropping her off back at work. The woman cut her finger pushing the knife away, but was otherwise uninjured.

CRUISE SHIP SHUTTLE PAYOFF MAY TAKE A WHILE, CBA SAYS

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL Business Association's cruise ship shuttle, which has proved to be a limited success so far, may be scaled back a bit in the future.

The CBA shuttled just 50 passengers from the 900-passenger Crystal Harmony into Carmel while the ship was anchored in Monterey Bay on Wednesday. Another 36 passengers on an organized tour also stopped in town.

Last month, the CBA's shuttle also attracted about 50 passengers from the Royal Caribbean cruise ship visiting the Peninsula.

Despite the low turnout, CBA executive director Brenda Roncarati views the most recent shuttle venture as a success — especially considering that Crystal Harmony is one of the upper-end cruise lines.

"These particular passengers, even if 20 of them return for a week, can make a huge impact," Roncarati said.

In addition, Roncarati is encouraged that 500 copies of the CBA's Guide to Carmel were distributed on board ship, possibly encouraging future visits to Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Roncarati said she would recommend continuing the shuttle service even though it hasn't brought in a lot of tourists.

In the future, however, the CBA may decide to hire just one bus instead of two.

"This is not one of the efforts with an immediate payoff, so sometimes it's easy to let go of those," Roncarati said. "But we have a real targeted approach to marketing exactly who can and should be coming here."

The CBA probably lost about $250 on the most recent venture. The $1,300 cost of the two buses was partially underwritten by two sponsors: Carmel Plaza and Ted Leidig's Carmel's Preferred Restaurants.

Roncarati said she was encouraged that several of the cruise passengers were looking for the CBA's shuttle as soon as they came ashore.

A raffle, including prizes of free overnight stays at Carmel Country Inn and the Cypress Inn, served as an inducement for the passengers to fill out comment cards about their time in Carmel.

Results of the survey were encouraging.

"The majority of them had visited a restaurant as well as an inn, looking for lodging for their next visit, and almost all said they had done shopping," Roncarati said.

The CBA's board of directors will evaluate the cruise shuttle system at its retreat in November. No more cruise ships are scheduled into Monterey until next year.

Paid parking scrutinized by residents, business owners

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A PROPOSAL to start charging for parking in downtown Carmel was explained to the public at a workshop Thursday evening — a workshop that drew more than its share of doubters.

Many of the residents and business people who attended the meeting told The Pine Cone they had concerns about how the "pay-and-display" proposal would affect them. Others were dead set against the venture.

"I hate it," said resident Paul Coss. "I tried to give it a lot of thought. I went to the demonstration and all I've heard about it is hostility."

Business owner and resident Maryann Carrigg said the proposal — to install one or two solar-powered parking kiosks on each downtown block — would freeze business in town.

"I've heard from all my customers who are regular shoppers from Pebble Beach and Carmel Valley who say they will not come to my city if paid parking goes forward."

If the city approves paid parking, Carrigg said she is prepared to join with some of her neighbors in a class action lawsuit challenging the proposal.

At the Oct. 10 meeting, Carmel Assistant City Administrator Greg D'Ambrosio presented a detailed report on how the pay-and-display program would work. Downtown drivers would buy the time they need to park at the kiosks and put their receipt as proof on their windshield. The program would also set aside certain areas of town for employee and resident parking.

At the beginning of the meeting, Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud reminded everyone that the city is still exploring the concept of paid parking to see if it fits with Carmel.

"Nothing is cast in concrete," the mayor said. "There is no vote tonight. I know emotions will run high, but let's try to be cogent."

The paid parking proposal calls for 135 pay stations to be installed on 37 blocks throughout the commercial district. Downtown parking would cost drivers $1 per hour from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Residents will be entitled to park on the residential blocks bordering the commercial district, and if they want to park in the commercial district they would buy a sticker for $5 per month or $60 a year.

People working in Carmel would be charged $5 a month to park in employee designated spots at Vista Lobos parking lot, and at nine other locations at the fringe of the commercial district.

Longtime resident Ken Otrich said he supports paid parking and believes it's badly needed in Carmel. But Otrich said he doesn't like the idea of increasing the fee for resident parking permits from $15 a year to $60 a year.

While Carla Ramsey said she is still mulling the proposal, she did not like the idea of assigning employee parking spaces on streets in front of people's homes.

Some who attended the workshop are still undecided.

"I haven't really made up my mind," said Tom O'Day. "I walk a lot, but I also drive in town, so I would have to see how that would affect me."

Former Carmel Planning Commissioner Allan Paterson, who served on the committee that studied the paid parking proposal, offered a mixed review of the program.

When the parking committee first studied the pay-and-display proposal, it was unique, Paterson said. But now that it has been put in place by several cities — including Portland, Ore. — Paterson said the "uniqueness we first thought it had has been removed."

But he added, "if you have to do paid parking, this is the way to do it."

14 MONTHS AND COUNTING . . . PFEIFFER BEACH STILL CLOSED

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WHAT BEGAN in August 2001 as a four-month closure for improvements to the road, parking lot, restrooms, trails and guard shack has turned into a year-plus-long shut-down of one of Big Sur's most popular beaches.

But the U.S. Forest Service insists the end is in sight.

"I'm hoping Pfeiffer Beach will be open sometime this month, but I've got to work that out with the contractor," said John Bradford, a district ranger for the U.S. Forest Service. Sansone Engineering of San Luis Obispo took on the job this summer after the $700,000 project's former contractor, Hacienda Heights-based Unitech Construction Company, walked out.

Sansone tried to salvage some of Unitech's work but mostly had to start from scratch, according to Bradford. The contractor finished repairing the road and paving the parking lot — which now offers 63 spaces — and building the new handicapped-accessible trail to the beach.

But the new restrooms and guard station, as well as the retaining wall in a turnaround on Sycamore Canyon Road near its intersection with Highway 1, remain incomplete.

Bradford said he wants to reopen the beach regardless.

"They'll have to fence off areas where they're still working so that from a public safety standpoint, we don't have people walking through," Bradford explained. He had hoped that could be done in September, but unfinished road work got in the way.

Sansone's contract gives the company until December to complete the job, but Bradford is optimistic everything — including landscaping and new signs — will be finished before then.

And while they've been denied use of the beach for so long, people should be pleased with what they find when they finally get the chance to return.

"I think everybody when they see it will be very happy with what they've done," he said. "It will be a much nicer facility than what we had down there before. We're trying to get it done as fast as we can."

Opponents say it's not too early to stop incorporation drive

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WHILE SOME say starting the process of incorporating Carmel Valley is the only way to allow people to decide whether cityhood would be good or bad, others fear doing so automatically puts opponents at a disadvantage.

"I would prefer it not get past the petition stage and I think the public should be informed that signing the petition puts the whole thing into motion," said Carmel Views resident Bob Sinotte, an outspoken opponent of incorporation.

The petition drive — the first formal step in incorporating — got under way at a town hall meeting at All Saints' Day School Oct. 9. Proponents of incorporation have six months to get 25 percent of the registered voters within the Carmel Valley Master Plan area to sign, including people who aren't sure they want to live in a City of Carmel Valley.

"If you sign, it means you think this issue is important enough to have information gathered," C.V. Forum member Glenn Robinson said. "We've stepped up to the starting line, and that's all."

Cathy West, executive officer of the Local Agency Formation Commission and the meeting's featured speaker, outlined the process and said ample opportunities will exist along the way for people on all sides to comment. LAFCO has the first say on whether an area can incorporate.

After receiving a complete petition, LAFCO staff members will undertake a fiscal analysis to determine if the proposed city would have the revenue to provide police, public works and other services for its residents. It would also study the environmental impacts of the new city.

If LAFCO determines the new city could not afford to operate, the process would stop. If it could afford to exist, LAFCO would hold a formal public hearing, accept public comment and then vote on whether the city should exist and what its boundaries should be.

Residents of the proposed city would then have a chance to protest its creation or the fact that it includes their neighborhood.

According to West, if 50 percent or more of the registered voters inside the proposed city limits object, the incorporation proceedings would also terminate.

But if the protests don't hit the 50 percent mark, individual neighborhoods could be included even if everyone living there objects.

The proposal for cityhood would then be put to all voters living within the proposed city limits.

"That's where real decision would be made — at a general or special election," she said.

GAMBOA SENIOR CARE FACILITY REJECTED BY COUNTY PLANNING COMMISSION

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A TWO-YEAR-old proposal to build a 78-bed senior care home at the mouth of the valley generated abundant debate over zoning, water use, flood risk, traffic and affordable housing at the Monterey County Planning Commission meeting Oct. 9. The project was rejected.

Voting 6-2, with commissioners Robert Hernandez and John Wilmot dissenting, the commission decided Sunrise Assisted Living was not a good fit with the area.

Commissioner John Brennan said his concerns about flooding, incompatible zoning and adequate water for the project would prevent him from supporting it.

In addition, Brennan objected to the proposal — submitted by owner Elvira Gamboa — because it provides no affordable housing.

"There is an extraordinarily high need for affordable housing," Brennan said. "This project seems to range from $3,300 to $3,750 a month. I would submit that is not an affordable housing concept."

But Hernandez argued that the idea of affordable housing in the valley is nothing more than a red herring. "Affordable housing was never really expected in the valley unless some nonprofit is willing to go in there and build," Hernandez said, adding that the senior care project had merit.

"This is a project for seniors who need this type of facility who have the means to move into it," Hernandez said. "Where else are you going to put this type of facility where other people won't say, 'Not in my backyard'?"

Numerous neighbors of the project showed up at the meeting to protest the 43,000-square-foot facility for frail seniors and Alzheimer's patients.

Gamboa hopes to build three one-story buildings on her 4.5 acres on Val Verde Drive on the south side of Carmel Valley Road.

Homeowner Alice Russell was one of several nearby residents who believe the assisted care facility and the road

NEWSLETTER

February or March" — long before Measure B was proposed.

But backers of Measure B — an advisory measure that asks voters if the water district should be dissolved — said distribution of the newsletter last week was apparently timed to coincide with the mailing of absentee ballots and was a misappropriation of taxpayer funds.

"Public entities cannot take sides on an issue," said Ron Pasquinelli of the Monterey County Taxpayers Association. "The water district is not allowed to enter into the battle over whether they should be dissolved or not."

"The city has a newsletter which comes out every quarter," said Monterey Mayor Dan Albert. "So if that's what the water district is doing, that's fine. But if this is a special edition, I'd like to know why it was done now."

Former supervisor and water district board member Sam Karas said the water district newsletter was "definitely electioneering" and he sharply criticized the district for spending tax money to ask the voters to vote no on Measure B.

The water district report, mailed last week to about 50,000 homes throughout the Monterey Peninsula and Carmel Valley, was prepared by former Coast Weekly reporter Richard Pitnick, according to Avila. It contains a brief history of the water district and lists its responsibilities:

- Promote and regulate water conservation;
- Regulate the collection and use of water;
- Design and construct water supply projects;
- Promote the use and reclamation of storm and wastewater;
- Foster scenic values and environmental quality; and
- Protect native vegetation, fish, wildlife and recreation.

The MPWMD has done really well, the newsletter maintains, pursuing all of the goals except the third one. The report admits the district has "yet to develop a new, sustainable water supply project for the Monterey Peninsula."

"They've had 24 years and spent $23 million in salaries and another $30 million in studies, and we have less water than we had when they started," Pasquinelli said. He urged voters to support Measure B.

Albert also urged a yes vote on Measure B, which will be on the Nov. 5 ballot. "The district was created because of a major drought, and the public thought they were going to give us more water we could use. But it just hasn't worked," Albert said.

Karas is also a strong supporter of Measure B.

"The water district has spent millions of dollars without producing a drop of water," Karas said. "And with the present board, there's no guarantee they'll ever support any water supply alternative that comes up."

While Measure B is non-binding, Karas said if it passes, the legislature should replace the water board with a joint-powers authority managed by the county and the cities of the Monterey Peninsula.

"I was on the water board for three years and I disliked every minute of it," Karas said. "It became political rather than working for the community."

I.D.

election reform bill will require changes in the way disabled people vote at all the county's polling places.

"Right now, a blind person has to ask for assistance to vote" with the punch card system, Anchondo said. But the new bill requires that disabled people be able to vote without assistance. That means the county will have to supply computerized touch-screen voting machines at all 200 local polling places. The machines allow a blind voter to put on headphones and vote by following audible instructions. The new machines, which cost $3,000 apiece, should be in place by the 2004 Presidential election.

public pointed to the sections of the coastal staff's rewrite they considered most troubling, including:

- a statement emphasizing Carmel Beach as "a major recreational and economic resource to the community and the state;"

- changing the city's highest priority for water allocation from residential uses to "coastal dependent uses, essential public service and basic industries vital to the economic health of the region, state or nation, public recreation, commercial recreation and visitor-serving land uses;"

- deleting a section aimed at preserving the level of density in the town's single-family districts, opening up those neighborhoods to more homes and condos, or, possibly, fewer homes and condos; and

- toughening up the city's language on new homes to "prevent" the construction of residences that are inconsistent with the established character. The city had originally proposed to use the word "discourage."

Former councilman Jim Wright said many of the coastal commission's ideas are in direct conflict with "long existing" city policies, and he called it "troublesome" that those "significant changes" were dropped in the council's lap without review by the public or the planning commission.

Rose suggested the city reject the entire rewrite — which he said would leave it up to the coastal commission staff to identify its "fight-or-die issues" to be hashed out between the two agencies.

"I don't know if that's the wisest thing to do," McCloud said. "We don't want to get in the position where we reject anything out of hand if some points have validity."

Ely said 80 percent of the changes suggested by the coastal staff were acceptable, but that the remaining 20 percent were "totally unacceptable."

But city councilwoman Paula Hazdovac said the new version of the LUP was riddled with problems, including contradictory statements and confusing language.

Hazdovac also wondered why some specific requests

Tish, a young California sea lion already known for his repeat visits to the center and an apparent unwillingness to return to the wild, hauled out on Carmel Beach Oct. 1 and was also taken to Sausalito.

made by the council were left out of the rewrite.

"At the last meeting [with coastal staff] I think we were pretty clear that we were asking for a compromise for the parking on Scenic to be prohibited from midnight to 5 a.m., but it's in here at least three times that it would only be limited from 2 to 4 a.m.," the councilwoman said.

Carmel City Administrator Rich Guillen said the best way for the council to get its feelings across to the coastal staff is to take the negotiations to a higher level — with the mayor, city attorney and Guillen sitting in on discussions.

"Obviously the council is not pleased with the negotiations thus far," Guillen said. "Maybe we should have the extension will disrupt their rural lifestyle.

"It's a dream I've had for 20 years to have a wonderful secluded place with a view for myself and my sister's family to have a peaceful way of life and keep our horses," Russell said, speaking of her home on Val Verde Drive.

Joe Hertlein, chairman of the Carmel Valley Land Use Advisory Committee that unanimously rejected the project, agreed the Val Verde property is not a good location for the senior care building.

As he showed snapshots of Gamboa's site to the commission, Hertlein warned that the project would dramatically alter the rural views. "There's an awful lot of orange netting out there," he said.

But Val Verde residents Joe and Irene Broadman, who have lived there since 1955 and originally named the street, spoke in favor of Gamboa's project.

"I really feel there is no better use for the property than what has been proposed," said Irene Broadman. "I have been against much of the development at the mouth of the valley over the last 50 years. I was against the condos where these people [objecting to Gamboa's project] are living now. I was against the shopping center and the golf course.

"But I feel the county has been asked by the state to provide houses for people and I think this an excellent opportunity to provide at least minimum housing for some of our seniors," Broadman said.

Gamboa's attorney, Tony Lombardo, told the commission that numerous senior citizen organizations agree there is a need for a minimum of 300 additional beds to serve older residents on the Peninsula.

The project was originally submitted to the county by Mrs. Gamboa and her husband, William, more than two years ago, Lombardo said. While waiting for their project to be approved, Mr. Gamboa died.

mayor representing you before the coastal commission to tell them exactly how you feel."

Councilwoman Barbara Livingston said she supported the idea of sending McCloud to negotiate with the coastal staff, but did not believe all the coastal staff's ideas should be rejected.

"I do not think this should all be thrown out," Livingston said. "I believe in your [McCloud's] position that there are some good things in here."

C.V. man: U.S. aid brings remarkable transformation to Gaza

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TODAY, HE'S a professor at the Naval Postgraduate School and an expert on the Middle East.

But Carmel Valley resident Glenn Robinson started his education in the cab of a PLO truck headed for the coast of Lebanon in early 1981.

Glenn Robinson

"I was an exchange student from Berkeley at the American University in Cairo, and I was traveling with another student," Robinson recalled. From Beirut, they tried to get into Syria but were turned back at the border because they didn't have visas. They hitchhiked with a PLO convoy, unaware that a recent Israeli raid on southern Lebanon would bring them under suspicion.

"I was taken to the coastal city of Sidon, where a PLO commander questioned me about what I was up to," Robinson said. "He finally decided I was just a stupid college kid and put me up for the night, then let me go."

Robinson, a professor in the national security affairs and defense analysis departments at the Naval Postgraduate School, specializes in Middle Eastern affairs.

He also visits Washington, D.C., monthly to share his knowledge with government officials and other experts there, and recently returned from a month-long stay in the West Bank and Gaza where he was evaluating U.S. Agency for International Development projects.

USAID, an arm of the State Department, funnels tax dollars to volunteer organizations working on projects that help "the poorest of the poor" in developing countries, according to Robinson.

In just three years, the agency has spent $180 million on 3,000 projects — including medical clinics, schools, women's and community centers and water systems — reaching almost all of the 600 villages in the West Bank and Gaza, he said.

The agency sent Robinson, who has reviewed USAID projects in the past and also spent a lot of time in the Middle East as an academic, to check out its work first hand and report back on the program's strength and weaknesses.

"I'm a known quantity willing to go there even when they're shooting at each other," he said.

It had been a couple of years since his last visit, so Robinson was eager to return. He flew out of Washington, D.C., on Aug. 2 not only on behalf of USAID, but as an academic in need of an update.

"As a professor, I needed to go and observe with my own eyes," he said.

Seal of approval

Traveling with a Palestinian man whose wife works for the United Nations, Robinson spent days in many tiny villages he'd never seen before. They drove a car with UN plates, enabling them to get through checkpoints and avoid being targeted by either side.

"Israelis have different colored license plates depending on who you are. Yellow is for Israeli citizens, so if you drive around the West Bank and Gaza with yellow plates, you will be a target for rocks if you're lucky, shooting if you're not," he explained. "Palestinians have green plates, and have to wait in checkpoints for hours and hours, and in some cases, overnight."

In addition to visiting new buildings and examining other USAID work such as roads and trash pickup, Robinson interviewed members of the volunteer organizations involved as well as residents of the small villages.

Critical in the past of USAID work because it often emphasized training and education rather than the "nuts and bolts so people on the ground see there's a difference being made," Robinson said he was impressed by what he found.

"It's clearly made a lot of difference in people's lives and left a tangible imprint," he said.

The Bedouin community of Um al-Nasr, a village of 5,000 people on the Gaza Strip, was a case in point.

A few years ago, "it was a completely backward place — you would go there and think you'd moved back in time 500 years," he said.

Now, every household has running water; many of the residents are online, and the village boasts a state-of-the-art medical center.

"They used to have to walk six kilometers to get to the

Sandy Claws

by Margot Petit Nichols

JACKSON and ARNIE Bennett, both 9, were coming up the 13th Ave. steps from Carmel Beach when we encountered them Thursday morning just after their joyous morning outing near the water's edge. Jackson's fur was sprinkled with sand, which showed up clearly on the black parts of his shiny coat, while Arnie's fluffy apricot coat revealed nothing.

Dad Peter, who refers to Jackson and Arnie as a "matched pair," is a rancher with a sense of humor who rides both his cattle ranches with part border collie Jackson running alongside his horse. The ranches are 900 miles apart, which necessitates many trips back and forth. Ever mindful of Jackson's comfort on these trips, Dad purchased a four-door pickup so that Jackson could have his own seat. Arnie rides shotgun on Mom Juanita's lap.

Arnie was a gift to Mom from Arnold Schwarzenegger hence the name — which, you must admit, is rather unusual for a miniature poodle. While cow dog Jackson's out herding cattle with Dad, Arnie prefers to stay home with Mom. Besides, Dad revealed, Arnie's too enthusiastic; he loves to chase steer, but lacks Jackson's cattle finesse.

Jackson became a Bennett when he was about one year old and was already fully trained in the fine art of cattle herding. All Dad has to say is "go ahead," and Jackson will speed off in front of the herd and do his stuff. Dad says Jackson's getting a little "foot weary," but still performs like a trouper both at the ranch near Clovis and the high savanna ranch in Arizona on the Mexican border.

The family's visits to Carmel-by-the-Sea about every three months provide a respite for them all. As you can see from Jackson's wide grin, his morning run on the sand pleased his weary feet no end, and Arnie clearly loves the cool sea air ruffling through his ears.

next village over, which had a doctor," he said. "And they have a brand new community center that was already being used even though it was not officially open yet."

Even Robinson's guide was astonished at the social changes — including new technologies and men acknowledging the important roles of women in the village.

"They had a transformation on the ground, and also in people's minds," he said.

But Robinson said he also observed projects failing.

"There's basically a siege in every village in the West Bank, so people can't travel from village A to village B," he said. "There are delays in building, because people literally can't get cement."

There are no jobs because people can't travel outside, he added. "It's like a series of prison cells throughout the West Bank. We had to go through checkpoint after checkpoint after checkpoint, and we could get through, but others can't."

And in the current climate, with suicide bombers killing civilians on a regular basis, the Israeli government is now denying permits for USAID projects it once supported, according to Robinson.

Donning the professor's cap

But in Gaza, there has been a remarkable transformation over the last seven years, Robinson said. He was struck by the building boom that has gone on despite the presence of a "corrupt and authoritarian" government.

Robinson said he was rarely concerned about being around so much violence but admitted being a bit nervous when he traveled to the village of Jenin.

— Glenn Robinson

"There was a firefight going on in a nearby refugee camp when we were there, and three people were killed," he said.

Robinson did not venture outside Arab areas often — only to check in with the U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv and visit friends — and said he promised his wife, Elizabeth, he would stay out of Israeli cafes and bistros because they "tend to go boom."

His wife is no stranger to the region, either. They lived in East Jerusalem and witnessed the first battles of the Palestinian intifada while he was working on his Ph.D. dissertation.

His fascination was sparked almost 10 years earlier, when Robinson applied for an American Field Service program and told organizers he wanted to go anywhere but Europe. They sent him to Iran in 1978.

"I was watching the Iranian revolution unfold, and it piqued my interest in Middle Eastern society and political violence," he said.

A couple of years later while enrolled at UC Berkeley, Robinson was torn between spending his junior year in Nairobi and Cairo. He chose the former, but a month before his departure, the university there shut down due to student riots.

Worried when the school failed to reopen, "I got very panicky and right before I was to leave, I asked if it was too late to switch to Cairo," he said. He got the thumbs up.

"I figured it was kismet," he said. "Fate."

Ruth Gilbert's 'Presence' exhibit opens at Cherry

of a Parisian meat delivery along the Rue de Seine is representative of the series, "Sight Unseen." Gilbert's exhibition, entitled "Presence," can be seen at the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts at Fourth and Guadalupe, Carmel-by-the-Sea commencing Friday, Oct. 11 through Nov. 15. The delivery of meat carcasses to Parisian butcher shops present haunting tableaux, with men in white-hooded garments suggesting a contemporary, symbolic rendition of the crucifixion.

A reception in her honor will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. in the center's gallery on Oct. 11. Gilbert, now 92, has led an extraordinary life that spanned a range of interests and avocations. She began her photography career in 1973 at the age of 63.

She will participate in a dialogue with Darci Forhman at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 17 in the Bingham Room, Room 6, Sunset Center, San Carlos at Ninth. Both events are free and open to the public. For information, call 624-7491.

German pianist solos with symphony

GERMAN PIANIST Oliver Kern will perform Chopin's "Second Piano Concert" as part of the opening series of concerts in the Monterey Symphony's 57th subscription season.

Music Director Kate Tamarkin will lead the symphony in a program featuring three works from the Romantic era: Berlioz's "Le Corsaire Overture," Tchaikovsky's "Fifth Symphony" and the Chopin piece.

Performances are at 3 p.m. Sunday and 8 p.m. Monday, Oct. 13-14 in the Pacific Grove Middle School auditorium, Forest and Hillcrest, Pacific Grove, and 8 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 15 at Sherwood Hall, 940 N. Main St., Salinas.

Single tickets for Pacific Grove are $46, $36, $26 and $15. Prices for the Tuesday concert are $35, $31, $25, $20 and $15. For information or reservations, call 624-8511.

CARMEL MISSION FIESTA ENTERTAINS VAST NUMBERS

NOT A corner of the Mission property seemed empty, judging from the crowd that attended the Carmel Mission Fiesta. Crafters, games for kids — including a karaoke setup for them — and great food made an irresistible combination . . . The Hon. Robert O'Farrell had pedaled to the event, while his wife Maria brought the car and was his ride home. They chatted with old friends Mike & Joan Hogan and Mike's mom Deane Hollenback . . . One group digging into the great food included teachers from the Mission school: Dee Rasco with hubby Dave, Marijane Flagg, Lyn Christiansen, and Ellen Buckley who still recalls hand-printing posters for the event as a kid . . . Bernice Vogelgesang had joined the Perry family, Connie & John with son Eric . . . Chrissie Mullen has been coming to this for the last 28 years, and had parents Austin & Maria Mullen and daughter Elena, 7, with her . . . Others seen: Gigi Clausen, Susanne Hewitt, Bruce & Rosalie Cardoza and Louise Nicolaides.

Buddies Dee Rasco and Marijane Flagg got together at the annual Carmel Mission Fiesta.

never looked much like a grandma — was dressed in an elaborate Renaissance gown. She shared details of the setup with Tony & Judy Tollner. "This is great — it more than replaces the Christmas store we lost at the Crossroads," enthused Judy . . . Single mom Cindy Tiberend, winner of the $500 raffle prize, was ecstatic. "This came at the best time," she exclaimed . . . Most impressive was Wendy Boddy, dressed as a replica of one of the Las Vegas showgirl dolls, along with Enjolie Shannon, dressed just slightly more modestly . . . Phyllis Hubbard managed to find items that matched her fashionable leopard-print outfit . . . Ellen Libertine, after an exhausting working summer, felt much better after her getaway to the family cabin in Idaho. Her son, who's in the film business in L.A., even took her white-water rafting . . . Margaret Pitzer of the body-care salon, Fronts & Backs, came with Patsy Yates, who laughed up a storm . . . Others there: Janet McTurk, Judy Furman, Paul & Audrey Johnson, Bruce & Kim Marcus, and Emily Nemec . . . PacRep supporters included Virginia Stone, Walt deFaria and Jackie Craghead, who joined in with the costumed carolers.

Getting prepped for Rehab

"Things to do now!" column. As I go to sleep, my mind's still racing with more possibilities.

D-Day, 8:30 a.m.: As I get dressed, heart pounding, palms sweating, I skip the make-up; I want to get it over with as soon as I can.

D-Day, 8:45

a.m.: I resolutely make my way to each TV, grit my teeth, unscrew and pull each cable out.

D-Day, 9 a.m.: I drive to a local store, which has just opened. I grab both black cable boxes, march through the doors, plop the boxes on the counter, and announce: "I need to close out my account."

The woman behind the counter smiles and nods, as if understanding. "You're moving?" she asks.

"NO!" I snap back, softening at her sudden start. "I'm a TV addict — I HAVE to go cold turkey."

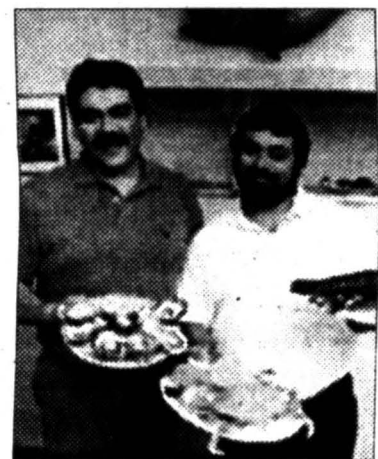

After giving me an odd look, she wisely decides to leave it at that.

Once the paperwork is done, I step out into the sunshine, and let out a long sigh of relief.

D-Day, 9:30 a.m.: The deed is done.

■ Carmel Valley Wine Festival growing

The Third Annual Carmel Valley Wine Festival's Grand Wine Tasting benefited the Carmel Valley Community Center this year. Held at the idyllic Georis Winery tasting room gardens, the warm weather made it feel truly like a resort . . . Whitney Jewett & Avlon Fipp moved here in June from N.Y. She organizes weddings for Carmel Valley Ranch and is also writing a book; he continues to be a columnist for the N.Y. Sun paper while penning a book of his own on centrism in American politics. "I spent years coming here with my parents and was afraid it wouldn't be as nice when I'd move here," Whitney said. "But it exceeded all my expectations — I love it here!" . . . Bill Parsons of Parsonage Village Vineyard, seen chatting with Bobbe Collins and City of Carmel's Sandy Davenport, is the "new kid on the block" who's exceedingly grateful for all the support he's gotten from other local wineries. "You'd not believe the sharing of experiences, especially telling me how to avoid the pitfalls they went through," he marveled, naming in particular Walter Georis, Rob Talbott, Jouillan's Ridge Watson and Chateau Christina's Frank Joyce. Bill's wife, Mary Ellen, is a renowned quilter and designed the labels. Both he and Walter would like to see one "co-op tasting room" for the smaller vineyards rather than adding more individual ones. Barbara Wheeler of Georis is nicknamed "The Octopus" because she handles so many tasks. "This festival was Walter's vision and each year it's been more successful," she explained. Walter, whose family members have long been generous community supporters for various causes, dreams of the day "the Valley can reclaim the ag status of 50 years ago, where the vineyards would create the greenbelts, while the ranch-type lifestyle would be maintained." . . . Renate Soares has lived in the Valley with her husband for 25 years and was helping with the event . . . Seen among others were the Jouillan Winery crowd: Deb Monnastes, Cynthia Hudson and Susan Leach.

Alumni of Carmel High's Class of '46 were reunited at Los Laureles Lodge for fellowship and reminiscing.

CARMEL BISTRO GOES FOR FRESH, UPBEAT ATMOSPHERE

IT TAKES dedication and fine-tuning to create a new restaurant that will survive and thrive during troubled economic times. And that's what owners Sal and Ashley Tedesco and executive chef Giacomo Stoltz are doing at this very moment at Carmel Bistro, Carmel-by-the-Sea's newest chic restaurant.

California Italian cuisine, influenced by Napa and Monterey County wines and Central Coast produce is how Chef Giacomo describes the fare he creates with a deft hand at Carmel Bistro. It's located in that choice spot on San Carlos formerly occupied by Jack London's Bar and Grill — just across the street from The Hog's Breath.

Ashley Tedesco told Morgan Carmel Bistro's going for a fresh, upbeat atmosphere, which can be casual to elegant, while offering entrées and wines at reasonable prices. And this week a "locals' lunch specials" menu has been created to attract a regular noontime clientele with lunches ranging from $4.95 to $8.95 including freshly brewed iced tea or lemonade.

Chef Giacomo's housemade soups (including his memorable clam chowder which is finished with a little Madeira) figure prominently on this new locals' lunch special menu: Soup, combined with a Caesar salad or a bistro salad of mixed greens, Point Reyes blue cheese, dried sweet cherries and caramelized walnuts, will bring your luncheon tab to only $6.95. A bowl of the housemade soup with fresh bakery bread is $4.95, as is a noontime repast of the soup combined with two artichoke bruschette. An Italian panzanella salad is $5.95, while a lasagnette of eggplant, penne pasta pomodoro, and linguine Alfredo (all combined with a side salad), or a grilled salmon salad are $7.95. Housemade ravioli of the day with a side salad is shown on the menu at $8.95. The regular luncheon menu of pastas, open-faced panini on ciabatta bread and bistro burgers are still offered, as well.

Dig this Val Davis archeological mystery

IF "THREAD of the Spider" isn't a good mystery novel title, I don't know titles. Val Davis, that Carmel-by-the-Sea spinner of fine webs (really husband and wife writing team Robert and Angela Irvine), has written another mystery with a well conceived and intricate plot readers have come to expect.

Two plots run throughout the novel, alternating back and forth, juxtaposing disparate people and situations, jumping from the late 1930s to the present time and back again. The two stories are unified by one Baptist Boyle, who, as a rough-hewn hide tanner and amateur archeologist in the '30s and '40s, bequeaths his Indian artifacts and a journal to the University of New Mexico and sequesters a treasure in the high caves of Utah's Burro Gulch.

The '30s plot features a bank-robbing couple, Knute & Nora, who resemble Bonnie & Clyde as they cut a wide swath across Utah holding up banks and going on the lam. Baptist Boyle is Knute's cousin.

The current day plot features archeologists discovering "the mother lode" of Anasazi petroglyphs in those same high caves in Burro Gulch.

Nick (Nicolette Scott), whose great love is antique airplanes, has been recently fired from her job as an historical archeologist with the Smithsonian. A summer job with her father, Dr. Elliot Scott (chairman of the University of New Mexico's archeology department), finds her on her father's exploration trip, along with Red Austin, an archeologist with the University of Utah, and two archeology students. While they search for artifacts, Nick investigate caves recorded in Baptist Boyle's journal.

The unifying element is Hiram Boyle, the hide tanner and amateur archeologist who gets religion when he emerges alive from a flash flood in a slot canyon and as a result, then becomes Baptist Boyle.

A 1937 Packard convertible sedan, hidden in a sandstone cave behind thick, metal-covered doors by Boyle, is Nick's historical archeologic find — and what it contains propels the plot toward startling revelations before the final denouement.

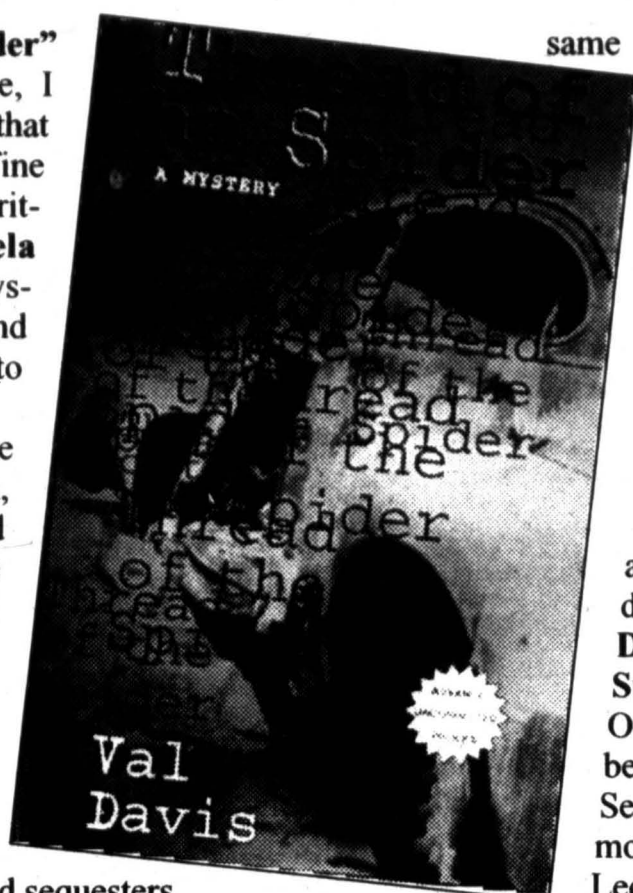

How the early plot coincides with the current-day plot is cleverly conceived by the author(s) and demands close attention by the reader.

"Thread of the Spider" will be on local bookstore shelves this week. The 256-page hardcover is a Thomas Dunn Book, an imprint of St. Martin's Press, New York, New York. It retails for $23.95.

BISTRO

Several downtown restaurants have found that offering very reasonable luncheons is a good way to introduce the chef's culinary ability, which in turn will draw locals back for dinner.

Monday night, usually a slow night at restaurants, drew in quite a number of diners to Carmel Bistro, mostly in fours and sixes, as well as couples, also. Most were locals, who seemed to be having a relaxed, joyful meal. When we made this observation to Chef Giacomo during our telephone interview with him on Tuesday, he said what he and the Tedescos want to do is make Carmel Bistro a fun place to come — a place to hang out. Sometimes, he said, patrons have stayed for four hours, lingering over dinner, but the average diner stays about two and a half hours.

And no wonder: the atmosphere and decor are conducive to leisurely dining: Sponged yellow walls, beautiful wine country paintings, mostly from Simic Showcase Gallery, an Italian-style credenza with large mirror above, and attractive light sconces across the back wall delight the eye. (Check out the restroom — it's a work of art!)

Chef Giacomo can keep an eye on his patrons while preparing food in his not-quite-exhibition kitchen. Before joining the bistro for its opening the weekend of the Concours d'Elegance, Certified Executive Chef Giacomo served in that capacity for 21 years at the Wharfside Restaurant on Monterey's Fisherman's Wharf. He was honored by his peers with a Chef of the Year award at an elegant dinner in the Monterey Plaza Hotel in 2001 (the Academy Awards of chefdom) by the American Culinary Federation, Monterey chapter, of which he is the current president. He is also a member of the esteemed Les Toques Blanches. He came to the U.S. at the age of 17 from his Northern Italian hometown of Vicenza, and makes his home in Carmel Valley.

Our Monday night dinner was a delight: The very tender "bistro short ribs" ($22) were braised for four hours in Carmel Wheat beer, ginger and soy sauce after having been marinated in a plum and orange marinade. One of his signature dishes, the short ribs are served with mashed potatoes garnished with bok choy, and ribbons of Japanese cucumber — a very special fresh accompaniment which mitigates the richness of the ribs.

To make this, he combines sweet red onions, the cucumber ribbons, rice wine vinegar, soy sauce, fresh lemon juice and Oriental sweet chili sauce. An appetizer portion of ribs is $11.

The perfect wine with the short ribs is a Qupé Syrah, a wine I had not tried before, indeed, had never heard of. What a discovery! From Santa Maria, this is a very big, spicy and sensual wine with a deep red, jewel-like color. It is $25 a bottle, or $6.50 per glass.

Our dinner companion chose Chicken Provencal ($17) as her dinner entrée. A chicken breast sautéed with tomato, mushrooms, sherry and a hint of cream was served over herbed Israeli couscous, a pasta based couscous that looks like white pearls. This dish was pronounced "heavenly," and should be a revelation to palates bored with standard chicken breast preparation.

There is one dish we must not ignore: It's a starter of "South of the Border" Mexican shrimp ($10) served in what is described on the menu as a salsa, but to us was a superb gazpacho of tomatoes, cilantro, cucumber, avocado and garlic with a Clamato and V-8 juice broth. So fresh, so flavorful! It was served in a soup bowl, but would have been better set off in a large minestrone plate, such as our Eastern Cherrystone clams ($9) were served in.

Dinner entrées run from $14 to $24, and wines range from $19 to $115 per bottle, but most are in the $23 range. There is a "Bistro Kids" menu, also, with yummy choices for $6 or $7.

If you haven't already done so, drop by the Carmel Bistro for lunch. We think you'll become a regular diner at this newest of the new restaurants in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Thank You for doing your part.

Once more, Monterey Peninsula residents have made sacrifices in their water use. September 30 marked the end of the "water year", the twelve-month period the State uses to evaluate how much water we use.

You have again met the State Order that limits Monterey Peninsula water use. You are rightfully proud of your success. By meeting the State's limit on water use, you helped avoid fines that could reach $3 million per year. Costs we all want to avoid.

The challenge begins again on October 1. We all need to remain vigilant in how we use water. As the rainy season begins, please turn off automatic sprinklers. Hotels and restaurants can help by only serving water upon request.

The passing of another year of sacrifice, aggravation and enormous expense should be a reminder to us all that Monterey Peninsula residents deserve a permanent, reliable water source.

From all of us at Cal-Am, thanks for your good work.

While these water saving tips are a good idea for everyone, the water use restrictions do not apply to residents of Ambler Park, Bishop, Hidden Hills and Ryan Ranch.

Setting kids up to fail

SOCIALISTS don't think there should be rich people. And they don't think society should allow anybody to fail.

Social Darwinists believe the opposite — that success should be rewarded and that there should be negative consequences for ignorance or laziness.

When state education officials instituted a High School Exit Exam, which would require every student to demonstrate a basic proficiency in English and math before getting a high school diploma, they came down firmly on the side of the Darwinists. But will they have the courage to stay there?

It won't be easy, because denying a diploma to a student who's attended school for 12 years seems cruel, even if he hasn't learned much. Anyone without a high school diploma is probably headed for a lifetime of low-wage jobs, if not welfare and handouts. Critics of the exam don't want anybody condemned to that fate — even 18 year olds who can't answer simple math questions.

But proponents of the test argue that giving a diploma to a student who made it all the way through the 12th grade with little more than an acceptable attendance record renders the diploma meaningless. Employers should know they'll be getting someone with a solid, if rudimentary, education when they hire a graduate of a California public high school, test advocates say. Are they being heartless?

The answer is No. But not for the usual reasons.

It will certainly be unfair to some of next year's seniors to be denied their diplomas if they can't pass the exit exam, because they've been raised in a society that has taught them not to worry about failure. It's obvious that many of them have been forwarded from one grade to the next without learning what they were supposed to — a progression of phony "graduations" that filled them with misunderstandings about what it means to learn, not to mention depriving them of the basic skills they need for life.

This is a failure of the educational system, not because it hasn't enough "programs" for its disadvantaged students — the usual rationale — but because it doesn't insist that they all complete their schoolwork.

It certainly isn't true that 50 percent of the current crop of high school juniors are too stupid to master eighth grade math — which is the level they're tested at to graduate. Nevertheless, statewide more than half failed.

It also isn't true that their schools haven't tried to teach them math. Every student in a California public school has math instruction every year.

Why haven't they learned it, then? For many of these students, it must be because they haven't tried.

And that is the ultimate heartless act: taking a perfectly intelligent small child and letting him grow up without caring about learning.

If the threat of failing the state's exit exam will get more students to hit the books, then making them take it is an act of true compassion.

Highway solution

Dear Editor:

Last week's editorial in The Carmel Pine Cone reminds us in no uncertain terms what a monumental environmental disaster has been foisted on the community by the abandonment of Hatton Canyon as a traffic bypass. The freeway proponents have argued this for several decades, and while the situation seems hopeless, acceding to the Highway 1 route as the location of the principal traffic artery should not be done so readily.

Firstly, a serious effort should be made to reverse the events that have led to this mess, unlikely as any success may now appear. Too much is at stake in the community's viability over the next half century or more. Making the Highway 1 route a giant traffic artery will isolate the neighborhood to the east as well as blight the residential areas on both sides. Stopping this is clearly worth a try given the alternatives.

Secondly, if events cannot be reversed, why not build a freeway along the west edge of the Hatton Canyon site on the fringe of the residential area? Even though the right-of-way might be narrow in places, the roadways could be partially stacked much like the beautifully designed freeway through Glenwood Canyon in Colorado, and cuts and fills could be kept to a minimum, even eliminated in certain areas. Admittedly, this would be expensive, requiring acquisition of 70 or more properties, but it would preserve the residential community as a unit and the high school as an integral part of Carmel. It would also permit the creation of a free flowing traffic artery, without overpasses and interchanges, which should be able to function with the same efficiency as the original freeway design. Furthermore, the present Highway 1 route would then revert to a low-traffic local road where the excess traffic lanes could be returned to landscaping, thus enhancing the residential area through which it passes.

So, the community shouldn't curl up and expire so easily on this issue. The Highway 1 right-of-way is not the only alternative, and it does not even come close to being a "solution."

Firefighters' memorial

Dear Editor:

I am asking for the community's support in acknowledging the life of one man lost in service. Mark Worley, a firefighter with Mid-Valley Fire District was "killed in the line of duty" on Sept. 14, 1977. He was 32 years old and my husband.

The September 11th event that shocked America rekindled my grief. Mark's sister, Debby, informed me that in April of this year, as a result of 9-11, Sacramento erected a memorial for those "killed in the line of duty." It was our desire that Mark's life be honored by including his name on that memorial. In contacting Mid-Valley Fire we began the paper chase of bureaucracy. Six months later, there is still no result despite

As much as people were shocked by the size and impact of 9-11, it is only those living intimately with public servants who really know how such events drastically alter life. To die at 32, "in service," is a huge loss. I'm asking for local support to place Mark's name along side the others "killed in the line of duty" at the memorial in Sacramento.

Hopefully, we are still the caring community that appreciates and acknowledges each of those who regularly put their lives on the line.

'Send a message to water district'

Dear Editor:

Peninsula residents: What has the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District accomplished in 24 years?

They recently spent your money sending a "Public Update" — coincidentally, just prior to the mailing of absentee ballots and vote on Measure B although, by law, they are not allowed to campaign.

Let's consider the other side of their claims:

WHO ARE WE — The agency that has spent $60-$100 million of your dollars.

WHERE WE ARE TODAY — Their charter is to augment our water supply. To date, we have 25 percent less than when they were established.

WHAT WE DO — Take credit for Cal-Am programs.

PUBLIC'S WATCH DOG — Opposed the current rate increase by Cal-Am, but they cost you $1.75-million for the Plan B study. Cal-Am pays for all EIR studies on projects and conservation programs imposed by the MPWMD.

PLANNING FOR THE FUTURE — They opposed Plan A, the new reservoir on the river which would have provided flow all year for the public trust resources. On Plan B, the Desal Plant at Moss Landing, they now question that study, and are considering another Desal Project in Sand City.

Send a message — ENOUGH IS ENOUGH! Vote YES on Measure B.

"Carmel Legends"

Della Walker was a childhood friend of FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT, and when she asked him to design a sea-side HOUSE for her, he was 84 years old. He didn't know that, so he accepted the challenge (his only ocean house), and personally supervised its construction in 1954. "Make it low," said Della, "so my neighbors views will not be interrupted." He did that, and now the prow of the house, on Scenic drive near Martin Way, drives ceaselessly into the waves that buffet Carmel Bay. It is designed like an ocean liner, facing the tireless sea. The living room, slightly sunken, looks across the deck through stepped-down windows like a captain's bridge. The corridors, right and left, are narrow. Doors are slender and locked tight with catches. The kitchen is a galley, saving space in every corner, yet totally efficient. Staterooms along the halls lead back to a master bedroom with views to port and starboard, and a fireplace to defy the fiercest weather. The roof is copper, now oxidized to a timeless green. Della doesn't live there anymore, but the house will last forever.

Carmel Valley committee mulls over wineries

By MARY BROWNFIELD

APPLAUDING WINEMAKER Bill Parsons for running a "model operation," the Carmel Valley Land Use Advisory Committee this week unanimously recommended the county grant him a new use permit to run his small winery for another three years.

At the same meeting, the committee delayed a vote on Holman Ranch owner Dorothy McEwen's application to open a winery on her 400-acre property, asking for more information about where the grapes would come from, how much water would be used to make the wine, and how many vehicle trips the new business would generate.

Parsons, whose vineyard yields 2,000 cases of wine a year, told the LUAC his water use and number of employees are lower than what was expected when he obtained his first use permit a year ago, according to chairman Joe Hertlein. Parsons reported using as little as half a gallon of water to produce a gallon of wine (not including growing the grapes) and said his family provides most of the labor.

LUAC secretary Glenn Robinson described Parsons' operation, located on nine acres half a mile east of Carmel Valley Village, as ideal because it's surrounded by open space rather than homes, uses so little water and involves no wine tasting events.

"He's there for the love of growing wine grapes and producing good wines he can sell at restaurants and markets," Robinson told The Pine Cone.

McEwen proposed a much larger winery. But she told the committee it may not ever reach the maximum 50,000-case production level in her application. If it did, it would be almost twice as big as Talbott, which produces 25,000 to 28,000 cases a year, and even bigger than Bernardus, which yields 40,000 cases.

Operating out of an existing ranch building, McEwen's winery would initially release 600 cases in 2003 and gradually grow over the following 11 years.

"She came in asking for a maximum consideration of what the operation may grow into, but she emphasized and it's understood it may never get that large," Hertlein said, adding that growth would occur in two phases. Phase one would hit 20,000 cases; growing to 50,000 would require a wastewater treatment system.

McEwen told the LUAC the ranch would grow half the grapes while the other half would be imported, Hertlein said. The committee wanted to know from where.

"If it's a Carmel Valley winery, the assumption is the grapes would come from Carmel Valley, but no one had an answer to that," Hertlein said, acknowledging that the immediate region is best for red wine grapes and that white wine grapes would probably come from elsewhere.

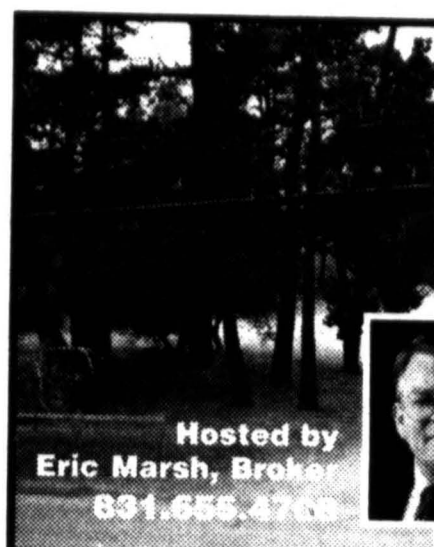

The LUAC also asked about additional traffic the project would generate, particularly with trucking in grapes, since the winery would use employees already there working with the horses.

A study concluded 95 additional trips would occur when the operation reaches its maximum — a number that could be easily offset by holding one fewer event a year at Holman Ranch, Hertlein said.

While the sheer size of the proposal will require some time to consider, Robinson applauded McEwen for presenting the whole plan up front rather than seeking piecemeal approvals down the line.

The plan would also keep the ranch whole rather than losing it to 40-acre subdivisions somewhere down the line, Hertlein commented.

"She's trying to keep the ranch as one intact piece of land which would be a tremendous contribution," to open space, historic preservation and the rural nature of Carmel Valley, he said.

California Performing Arts Festival

Local festival grows bigger, wider ranging

By PHILIP PEARCE

Actors, dancers and musicians from all parts of the globe will home in on the Monterey Peninsula this week to join local arts headliners for the 2002 California Performing Arts Festival. The Festival, with more than 60 performances in over 20 venues, runs Oct. 16 through 27, and is the brainchild of Founder/Director Robin McKee, who can look back on nine years of dreaming, planning and nurturing C.P.A.F. into life and world-wide recognition.

"We're now the largest performing arts festival in California," McKee explains. "Possibly in the whole United States."

"There are lots of amazing and wonderful arts festivals, but most of them focus on only one art form. Our broad cross-section makes us a bit more like the Edinburgh Festival — not just national but known in places as near as Mexico and as far away as Russia."

Miller/Lind Duo — Rockin' Folk Blues Café

Peter Davison — Poet of Motion

McKee has a wide experience of work with a host of theater companies, including Los Angeles' Mark Taper Forum and London's Royal National Theatre.

Recalling the birth of C.P.A.F., she says, "My husband Bob (Walker) thought I needed a local, high-caliber project, just to keep me from continuing to cover the country for a succession of directing assignments. So in 1994, I wrote a grant application, the Cultural Council gave us some help, and we signed up individuals or groups I'd discovered in my travels. We played just Carmel for one week — but we were launched. Now the 'C' in our name stands for 'California.'"

She still direct (she's just done "Crimes of the Heart" at Magic Circle Theater) but birth of a daughter, Cambell Ruth Walker, keeps her closer to home on the Monterey Peninsula these days.

Multi-faceted

The festival as it's now structured started in 1997, when music and dance were added to the menu and half the performance events were offered by local artists.

In 2000, Robin was pleased to give up the "one woman whirlwind" status and Hattie Catania, local stage manager and producer, was added as a fulltime Producing Manager.

Robin and Hattie are supported in doing fundraising, selecting performers each year and event planning all year by an energetic and business-oriented Board of Directors and an enthusiastic and hands-on Special Youth Committee.

Anyone interested in volunteering for the festival on any level is welcome to call the Festival Office at (831) 642-9040.

Expanded area

This year's festival has added a whole string of new venues, from as far south as Big Sur and as far north as Marina. The 2002 Festival also aims at a wider range of shows aimed at young audiences, including a Children's Music Festival starring MaryLee Sunseri and two circus arts performances for children of all ages, Circ do Somethin'. And for the first time, it's possible to book one of five festival acts in your own home.

For information, tickets and reservations, write C.P.A.F. at P.O. Box 221473, Carmel, CA 93922-1473, visit www.californiafest.org, or phone (831) 642-9049. ★

FESTIVAL LAUNCHES NEW NAME WITH 2002 SEASON

FOUNDED BY Robin McKee in 1997, the Carmel Performing Arts Festival, the largest, most diverse professional performing arts festival in the state of California, has a new name. California Performing Arts Festival better describes this unique festival and its goal of presenting an extensive variety of professional music, dance, spoken word and theatre to California audiences.

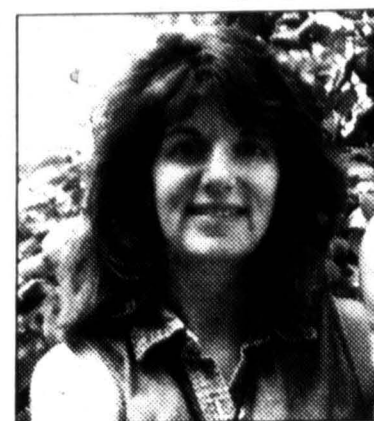

"The festival, which began as a Carmel-area based festival, has been gradually expanding its reach to serve a larger segment of the county," states Founder and Executive Producer, Robin McKee.

This may seem like a lofty goal when non-profit organizations around the country are struggling just to maintain a sense of stability, yet, McKee and the enthusiastic board of directors believe anything is possible. The organization is just as strapped for funding as any non-profit, yet these committed volunteers have set their minds on success.

It seems to be working. Where the organization is short on dollars it is long on volunteer commitment and community support. With the close of Sunset Center as a venue for the festival's larger performances, Producing Manager, Hattie Catania, was forced to look elsewhere for venues. Thankfully the community opened its arms and made room for festival performances at places such as CSUMB World Theater in Seaside and the Steinbeck Forum in Monterey.

"It is wonderful to see the community support and I couldn't be more pleased with the diverse selection of performance venues this year," states Catania. "We will host our performances in more than 20 different venues this year, making festival activities available to nearly everyone in Monterey County. From poetry slams at coffee shops, to the Ballet stars of Moscow at the CSUMB World Theater."

The California Performing Arts Festival (CPAF), formerly the Carmel Performing Arts Festival, is a nonprofit organization which strives to bring attention to Monterey County's culturally diverse performing artists and introduce national and international artists to local audiences. The festival will host more than 60 performances taking place at more than 20 different venues, during the 12-day period from Oct. 16 through 27. ★

By PHILIP PEARCE

Audiences will meet a past favorite in a new mode when master juggler, movement and monologue artist Peter Davison premieres "A View From The Moon" Oct. 24 to 27.

"It uses a big picture frame — and goes on, through movement and words, to illuminate Van Gogh's letters and writings and to link him with other artists who didn't really fit in very well — who eventually went insane. I'm not saying

Russian ballet stars celebrate event Oct. 19

By PHILIP PEARCE

CPAF celebrates the 2002 festival with a gala evening of classical ballet as the internationally acclaimed Ballet Stars of Moscow, directed by Bolshoi Ballet Master Shamil Yagudin, perform at the World Theater on the CSUMB campus at 8 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 19.

The event is part of the company's seventh tour of North America. Debut performances in the fall of 1990 won high praise from American critics and audiences. The troupe brings together 10 young solo artists from Moscow's leading companies — the Bolshoi, the Moscow Classical Ballet and the Stanislavsky Theatre Ballet.

The program for the current tour includes "Walpurgis Nacht," the Rose Adagio from "The Sleeping Beauty," "The Dying Swan" and the Pas de Deux from "Esmeralda."

Ballet Master Yagudin is no stranger to the West Coast or the Pacific.

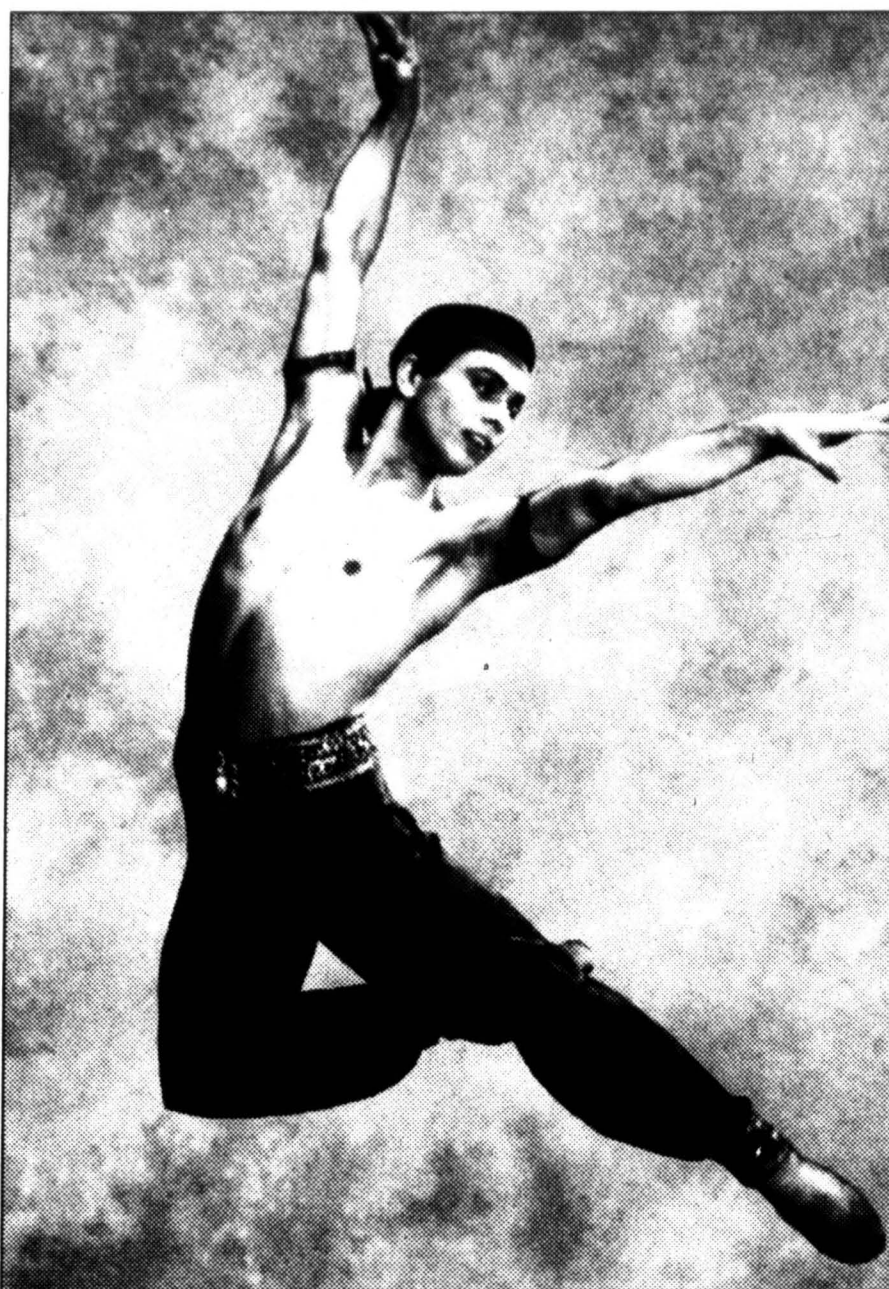

"We have played Los Angeles, San Francisco, Sacramento — Carmel first in 2002 — even Hawaii."

Dancing with a group called Rainbow, Shamil Yagudin was featured on the Ed Sullivan Show and has worked with Leonard Bernstein at the Tanglewood Festival.

For all the skill, discipline, energy and grace that go into its creation and performance, he believes classical ballet isn't an elitist dish to be served up exclusively to big-city esthetes or patrons of prestigious dance festivals.

"To watch ballet is simple — it goes to the heart. It's for everybody."

The New York Times called a Ballet Stars perform-

Ballet Stars of Moscow — once-in-a-lifetime stop in Monterey area — one performance only Oct. 19.

mance "a sumptuous ballet feast. The couples looked as if they had been dancing together all their lives, in partnerships that were well matched, sensitive, exciting."

Festival opening weekend audiences will share the excitement on Oct. 19. Admission to the performance includes a post-performance reception on the CSUMB campus. A pre-show public discussion with Ballet Master Shamil Yagudin is also a part of this ever-growing festival. ★

DAVISON

that started with Peter Davison as a teenaged street juggler and junior vaudevillian in 1970s Los Angeles.

A move to Boulder, Colo., in 1980 opened up the unexplored worlds of dance, monologue, circus and stand-up comedy for him. His career — and vision — began to expand and take off when a Colorado based dance showcase stretched its limits to include him and fellow members of a juggling troupe called Air Jazz.

"That experience exposed us to the possibility of combining dance with the juggling we were using in performance."

What emerged was the possibility of telling stories through what Peter describes as "the manipulation of objects" material things not used to be thrown in the air and deftly caught but as solid, shifting, changing expressions of feeling and thought.

At home in Boulder with his wife, dancer Ana Claire and their two children, he teaches, writes (he is author of "Thoughts on Thoughts While Practicing") and conceives, choreographs and rehearses performance material when he's not away on tour or appearing in dance festivals or television venues like The Tonight Show and the Disney Channel's "New Vaudevillians."

For Peter Davison, C.P.A.F. is an ideal launch pad for the new, more sophisticated tone of "A View From The Moon."

"The vaudeville and circus material is what gets the most positive feedback in rural areas. People love it — as they loved it in Carmel in 1997 and 2000. But Monterey Peninsula audiences respond more than most others to the kind of challenging material I use in this new piece."

"It's more completely theatre and dance than what I've done before. What happens happens through voice and movement and the manipulation of objects."

Audiences can share the experience when Peter Davison, poet of motion, offers the world premiere of "A View From The Moon," 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, Oct. 24 to 26 and 6 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 27 at the Carmel Ballet Academy. ★

Obo Addy — Ghanian drumming the traditional way

By PHILIP PEARCE

My father was what you Americans would call a medicine man or shaman — what we call a wonche in Ghana," explains Obo Addy, who brings the traditional drum, music and dance of Accra to the festival on Sunday, Oct. 27 and conducts a hand drumming workshop on Saturday, Oct. 26.

"Wonche means 'father of the spirits' and the wonche's work is done through drumming, singing and dancing. Some of the traditional drumming I learned from my brothers and sisters. (I grew up with 52 of them: my father had about 10 wives). He would train the older ones and they would pass it down the line. But other times he sat all of you down and taught you to sing and drum."

From those traditional family and religious roots have sprung the USA's only Ghanian dance and music troupes, one headed by Obo in Portland, Ore., the other working out of Troy, N.Y. under his brother Yacub.

"Where I come from — Accra, the capital — drumming is all done with the hands to make five different drum sounds."

And traditional dance depends on following the lead of the master drummer, who serves as music conductor and on-the-spot dance director, through spoken commands and a vast catalogue of traditional drum rhythms, which dictate the dancers' moves.

"That's why Ghanian dance is so difficult," Obo Addy explains. "You don't just count time (rhythm). You have got to know how to sing the drumming part, to know the phrasing that the master drummer might decide to use.

"So there is no way I am going to turn people, even those with drumming experience, into master drummers in one short hour at the drumming workshops. But we'll start where we have to and end up making some music together."

"The first thing I will need to find out is whether people have any drumming experience or whether I have got to start with fundamentals. Use your hands the wrong way, with the fragile parts, and you can hurt yourself."

When Obo started work in Portland, where he lives with his American wife, Susan, he began by adapting music of the Accra tradition for American instruments and musical notation in a band comprising trumpet, saxophone, keyboard, base guitar and trap drums. Only after gathering the troupe of Ghanian expatriates who will accompany him to the festival for the Oct. 27 performance, did his program again become more strictly traditional. But the "American" band survives and formed part of Addy's debut performance in August at New York's Lincoln Center.

C.P.A.F. audiences will meet Obo Addy in his strictly traditional mode.

Be sure to catch this memorable event. The Ghanian drumming workshop will be held at 4 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 26 at the Scout House, Carmel. Obo Addy and his ensemble will be performing at 5:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 27 at the Steinbeck Forum in Monterey, followed by the post-show Festival Finale Dance Party. ★

Homescapes, Carmel

A new "secret garden" opens in Carmel

Carmel lost one of its treasures when the Secret Garden on Dolores closed its doors in 2001. Long-time residents remember the days when the Creamery next to the Standard station on Ocean filled the bellies of children while parents filled their cars with octane. The produce market, Mediterranean Market... in 2001 the Secret Garden joined so many old favorites as just a sweet memory.

When Carmel natives Thompson Lange and Beau Finklang opened Homescapes, Carmel in 1999, they were very aware of the Carmel that existed just down the street from their classrooms at Wood's School on Dolores in the long ago 60's. They filled the old bank on 7th and Dolores with art, plants orchids and furniture they hoped would feel as artistic and original as the Carmel of their childhoods. "It's a funny thing about being from a bohemian artists community that becomes a travel destination," says Lange, whose degree in Scenic Design from UCLA has influenced the merchandising of the store. "A lot of people are surprised that we travel to such far-flung places just to find some relic that might look good as a coffee table. All I can say is...the Carmel I knew when I was a kid was filled with tie-dyeds and patchouli. Expressing yourself was the mantra of the day," he adds with a smile.

With that in mind, when Thompson's brother and business partner, Beau, suggested they add a garden to Homescapes, Carmel the idea instantly hit a chord.

The charm of Carmel's Secret Garden is revisited in the gardens of Homescapes, Carmel.

The Homescapes staff celebrated their third anniversary on September 29th. From left: Mitsuko Gammon, Edward Chiorazzi, Thompson Lange, Kathy Apodaca, Beau Finklang, Laurie Bliss and Sally Higgins.

In August, Thompson rummaged through English salvage yards for architectural finds for the new garden at Homescapes, Carmel.

"When we opened our first store in 1994 a garden was very much part of our business plan," says

Finklang. "When we sold our interest in The Grove and devoted ourselves to the Carmel location we really felt a void." Finklang, whose degree in horticulture was instrumental in the merchandising of interior plants and orchids for Homescapes, Carmel set out to clean up and replant the area between the 5,000 square foot main building and the light-filled adjacent annex on Dolores the brothers acquired in November 2001. This past August, Lange went to England and found a garden's worth of architectural artifacts and the rest is (Carmel) history. Just in time for Homescapes, Carmel's 3rd anniversary a new "Secret Garden" is born.

The Second Hand: Who's lifting whom?

By PHILIP PEARCE

We're three men and we definitely go beyond your expectations," says Andy Horowitz, co-founder of an incredible, flexible trio called The Second Hand.

"One critic called our work 'experiments in Human Architecture' and we kind of like that description. We may be dancing and then suddenly we pick each other up off the ground so that only a hand or leg is supporting all three. Or we tie ourselves in knots and formations that are so weird and unbelievable you can't tell who is lifting whom . . . We're physical humorists, as comfortable on a comedy stage or in the entertainment segment of the Letterman Show as we are at a dance festival."

Andy Horowitz didn't start dance classes until he was 22 — late in life for most professional dancers.

"But it was easier than it might have been if I hadn't already been all limbered up since childhood as an acrobat and martial artist."

Creative sparks started to fly in dance

The Second Hand, astonishing acrobats, humor and dance — one performance only, Oct. 20 rehearsals with classmates Greg O'Brien and Paul Gordon at Binghamton University, New York.

"We discovered each one of us was strong enough to lift the other two — which opened up the possibility of two being off the ground at the same time."

Greg O'Brien remains a member of the team. The other Second Hand co-founder, Paul Gordon, retired at the end of 2001 and has been replaced by Marlon Torres.

"I think what we do is important because we live in a world where the multi-nationals want everything designed to sell you a product . . . Live theatre is different — and dangerous. It works, often under the surface, to question and undermine that multi-national commercialism. That's why any government setting out to repress its citizens anywhere on this globe almost always opens fire right away on artists and the arts."

"And things in live theatre can go wrong too. People miss cues . . . lights fuse . . . scenery topples over. When that kind of thing happens with The Second Hand, I can step out on stage and say, 'This is why THIS is better than television. TV is about the expected. Live theatre is about the unexpected!'"

"As a species, we humans need stories — stories that play out our troubles, ethical religious, what have you. We do it by detaching ourselves from the immediate crisis or heartache and watching dramatized solutions that lead us toward truths. Under the comedy and the timing and athleticism of The Second Hand, we hide those kinds of truths."

The Second Hand plays Sunday, Oct. 20, at CSUMB's World Theater, and the troupe will also do "Shows2Go" workshops in several Monterey County schools during the Festival. ★

Special Youth Programs

TIX4KIDS & SHOWS2GO!

he California Performing Arts Festival's Special Youth Programs consist of two ambitious programs. The TIX4KIDS program serves to expose at-risk youth to the performing arts. This program, conceived by former CPAF board member Barbara Bishop was introduced in 1998 and served 250 students that year.

During this year's festival, 500 at-risk young people and their caregivers will be transported to several festival performances, enjoy a fabulous pre-show party and receive a wonderful imagination package provided by generous local retailers.

The second program is CPAF's SHOWS2GO, through which CPAF strives to fill the gap in the dwindling arts programs throughout Monterey County Schools. CPAF provides the funding and guest artists for hands-on workshops and performances at Monterey County schools, youth residences, and community organizations taking place throughout the year.

Monterey Mattress Panda snuggles with Tix4Kids attendees at the Outdoor Forest Theater.

Together CPAF youth programs expose more than 2,500 children to new and exciting experiences, giving them an opportunity to imagine new, creative goals, positive lifestyles and foster self-esteem. Former Board President, Richard Gorman, a practicing attorney and painter, explains the impact the programs have on the children.

"These kids often have never experienced a live performance. I believe these events open their minds and their souls to new ideas and foster positive self-esteem."

TO PERFORM, OR NOT TO PERFORM — 'SHYLOCK'

By PHILIP PEARCE

I stumbled across it on the Web — emailed the author, got a script — and felt chills. It has so many parallels with my own life as an actor! It says things I've always wanted to say to an audience!"

Prize-winning actor and C.P.A.F. veteran Ron Campbell is nothing if not excited about his newest venture, "Shylock," a one-man show about an actor whose portrayal of Shakespeare's villainous Venetian has just been canceled in the face of audience protests that it's anti-Semitic.

The actor-audience debate "becomes a jumping-off point for a whole lot of important questions. . . Who is Shylock? A pathetic victim? . . . a tragic old man we ought to feel sorry for? . . . An outright villain? What is permissible and what isn't in a work of art?"

"When we did it in tandem with 'The Merchant of Venice' in San Diego, it got ovations. Discussions afterwards with a Shakespeare scholar and a couple of rabbis bristled with issues and ideas.

"The actor in 'Shylock' starts in the full traditional regalia — the wig, the nose, the beard. By the end, he's shed it all, piece by piece, and stands there just a man.

"The playwright, Mark Leiren-Young, is half Jewish — so am I. And this piece has helped the Jewish community where it's been performed to understand why it's possible — and important — to continue performing something as controversial as 'Merchant'.

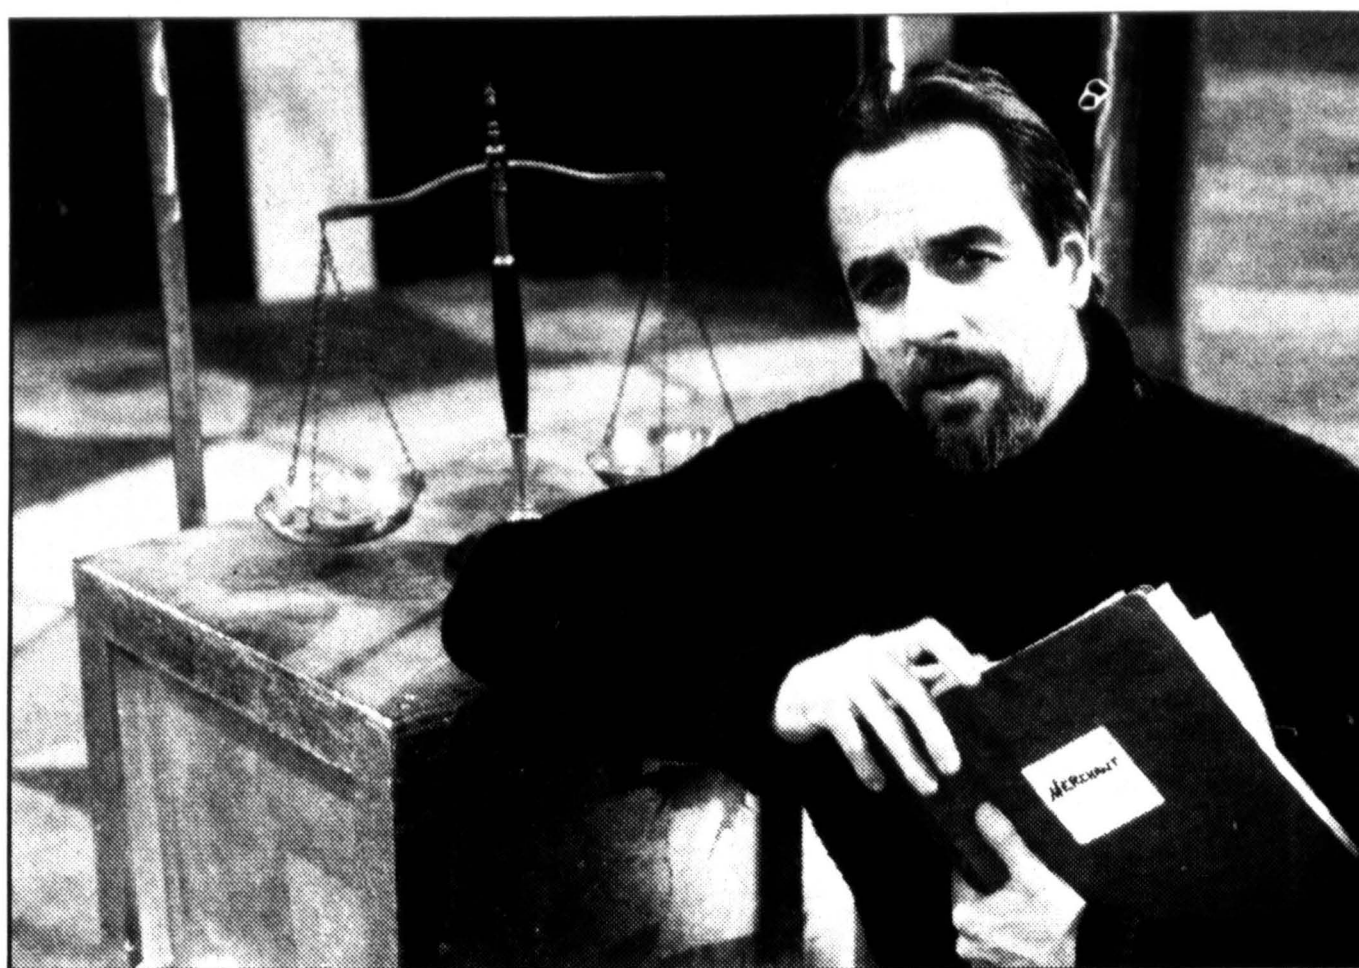

"Seeing me strip away make-up and bits of costime in 'Shylock,' I think audiences get the same thrill at sharing what they probably start out thinking is a kind of magic — but discover is really hard work."

Ron Campbell in full makeup as Shakespeare's controversial Jewish character, "Shylock," - Oct. 21 and 22.

Ron Campbell's hard work has earned him a host of prizes, including the Los Angeles Drama Critics Circle award, the London Fringe and Edinburgh Fringe First Prize, plus a nomination for a recent Helen Hayes Award.

Festival audiences will see "Shylock" at the Carmel Ballet Academy, Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 21-22 at 8 p.m. ★

Old-world mellow, new-world cool come together in piper's music

By PHILIP PEARCE

A famous Irish piper once said it takes 21 years to become a piper — seven learning, seven practicing and seven playing. I've been at it for exactly 21 years, so I guess I've run out of excuses."

Celtic music enthusiasts and professional critics don't think Todd Denman and Aniar need any excuses. They play traditional Irish pipe, whistle and fiddle and add modern elements that blend old-world mellow with new-world cool and energy.

It started when a teenaged Todd Denman gave up rock and roll and dreamed of having a new instrument in his life.

"I heard some Irish music on the radio and I was smitten," he recalls. "I heard the traditional uilleann pipes of Ireland and I knew I'd found my new instrument."

"Everyone who knew anything about it said, 'You'll never find a set. And, if you do, you'll never get them to work right. And even if they do work, you'll never learn to play them.'

Todd Denman of Aniar with his unique and rare uilleann pipe — Oct. 21*

"They're a rare, difficult and sweet instrument. Unlike any other bagpipes anywhere, these play two full octaves and all the half steps between."

Irish piping is unique in the way it fuses melody and rhythm. "Most music either has great melody but routine rhythm (American ballad pop) or great rhythm without much melody (African). You can't stop these pipes for the beat, so you add ornament, articulating with your fingers. That's very old and it goes with fiddle, which we've got (Tina Lech). We add guitar (Flynn Cohen) and the really cool new sound of a sensational Irish organist named Aemonn Flynn."

Todd Denman and Aniar perform at Quail Lodge from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 21 as part of the annual CPAF Cocktail Cabaret, with delicious, light hors d'oeuvres included in the ticket price. Todd is also part of the new "House Concert" Series. People can book him with his pipes as a solo performer in their home.

House concert bookings are available now through Dec. 15. ★

KIDS

San Lucas Union School District Art Teacher, David Allan writes of the SHOWS2GO program, "... Your performance provided a surprising interaction with the students, emotionally and intellectually uplifting all! Your professionalism precipitated a universal satisfaction on the part of all the children and adults who witnessed it."

Terry Espinoza Baumgart of Alisal Community Head Start Program states of the TIX4KIDS program, "For two years in a row, I have seen the same reaction from participating children... one of pure joy and excitement. During the performances, supervision is not required, the children are super-glued to their seats. Gracias! from the kids for a world-expanding experience. It is programs like yours that make a difference in children's lives."

To achieve this year's goal of serving 500 at-risk youth through TIX4KIDS the CPAF must raise $28,000. To serve five locations with the SHOWS2GO program, CPAF must raise $17,000. Each $25 contribution received covers the expenses for an individual child. More contributions are needed.

Volunteers to help raise needed funds and orchestrate youth events are welcomed. To make a contribution or to get involved in these community programs call the CPAF office: (831) 642-9040. ★

A MESSAGE FROM THE CALIFORNIA PERFORMING ARTS FESTIVAL

CPAF's Special Youth Programs are made possible by generous sponsors, donors and members.

Sparkling eyes and smiling faces of children experiencing live performances for the first time are the rewards for the many community members who contribute $25 per child each year to bring the arts and young people together through CPAF's two unique Special Youth Programs.

SHOWS2GO will tour professional performances and hands-on workshops to more than 2,000 young people this year. SHOWS2GO projects are made available to schools, juvenile residencies and youth organizations free of charge, because of your donations.

TIX4KIDS provides more than 500 at-risk children and teens with transportation to inspiring festival performances. Each participant enjoys a fabulous pre-show party and receives a creativity gift bag in addition to the performance, thanks to your contributions.

Please make your 2002 Special Youth Program (SYP) Contribution: $25 serves one child for one year. Thank you for your contribution!

CPAF is a 501(c) 3 nonprofit organization. Your contributions are tax deductible under our Tax I.D number: 77-0442460. ★
